

Abstract

A camera in particular for a motor vehicle having at least one image converting element is described. The image converting element includes at least one image sensor and is connected to at least one additional element of the camera, e.g., the housing of the camera, by at least one interlock.

5 (Figure 1)